LEARNING GERMAN
DEUTSCH LERNEN
Our mission is to be the leading, culturally diverse and family-oriented international school with English as the principal language of instruction.

We inspire individuals to develop their intellect, creativity and character to become independent, adaptable, socially responsible and internationally minded citizens, by ensuring a dynamic, inquiry-driven education of the highest standard.

INTRODUCTION

FIS is driven by its mission statement and beliefs. These have produced a strategic plan which guides the school’s future expansion and provides direction for its academic courses. Language learning is an integral part of the strategic plan.

From the FIS Strategic Plan 2005-2010

Action Plan #4: We will ensure that students develop and increase proficiency in English and additional languages, taking into account demographic changes.

Specific Result 4.5: Students will have a clearly articulated, cohesive German learning program which reflects best practices for each developmental level.

The school’s policy manual contains four statements which deal directly with the importance of learning German at all levels.

Extract from Policy 7.504

3.
As host country language, German is offered at all levels throughout the school at a sufficient number of proficiency levels to meet the educational needs of all students.

3.1
In general, all students are expected to be enrolled in German language classes unless they have special educational needs, identified by qualified faculty, which specifically preclude such study.

3.2
Students who are German citizens and/or permanent legal residents of Germany are generally required to attend German classes throughout the period of their enrollment at FIS. Such classes may be offered within the regular German program or by means of dual language, immersion or bilingual classes.

3.3
Other students in grades 9-12 may choose an alternative language course once they have met what the school determines to be the minimum proficiency requirements in German by means of an appropriate test. In some cases, permission may be granted to a student who enters grades 9-12 who does not meet minimum proficiency requirements in German to choose an alternative language course in order to fulfill the requirements of the International Baccalaureate program for the entry requirements of a particular institution of higher or further education.
The school focuses on results. It is committed to the expansion of its language programs and it is proud of the achievement of its students.

- As of the 2009/2010 school year, there are 12 languages being studied at FIS: English, German, French, Spanish, Japanese, Korean, Swedish, Dutch, Chinese, Norwegian, Farsi and Slovene.

- 70% of our students are non-native English speakers. The vast majority are able to attend mainstream English classes after just two years of ESL instruction.

- All students learn in an English immersion environment. All take English language arts courses and 99% are enrolled in German language arts.

- 75% of elementary school students who began learning German in grade 2 or earlier are able to attend German classes at (near) native level by grade 8.

- 40% of all FIS students speak three or more languages.

- 70% of FIS students graduate with the International Baccalaureate Bilingual Diploma.

- 95% of all students applying with the IB Bilingual Diploma to the Kultusministerium for Abitur equivalence were awarded a grade of 2 or higher.

- Over the past years, our students have a 100% pass rate in IB mother tongue examinations.

- FIS also offers adult education classes in ESL, German and Italian as a foreign language and German, Spanish and French as part of the REAL (after-school) program.
The benefits of a bilingual education have been known for many years. Students perform just as well and often better than monolinguals on standardized tests; they are able to communicate with more people in more places; bilinguals exhibit greater nonverbal problem-solving abilities and more flexible thinking; the bilingual learner’s brain is exercised more—both hemispheres are active when using more than one language; there are fewer memory lapses with older people and the risk of Alzheimer’s disease is lowered.

At our Wiesbaden Campus, an integrated German program is part of the curriculum in grades one to three. Teachers present aspects of the Units of Inquiry of the PYP program in German and differentiate their instruction according to the proficiency level of the student in mixed German language ability homeroom classes. In grades four and five, all children receive German language arts instruction three times a week and content-based instruction twice a week in leveled groups.

In the primary school at FIS, there is an integrated program in which art is taught in German and English to children in primary through grade 1. Beginning in the 2009/2010 school year in the elementary school, the current “immersion” program will be phased out over a three-year period. It will be replaced by daily content-based German language arts classes in leveled groups and by an optional “integrated German” program in grade three followed by an optional two-year English/German bilingual program in grades 4 and 5 where half the curriculum is presented in each language. Admission to the integrated and bilingual programs depends on the proficiency level of the student’s English and German. In grades 6, 7 and 8, there is an optional integrated German program for suitable applicants where one complete academic course is taught in German. To date, this has been either humanities or science.

At the end of grade 12, if a student has passed the IB diploma with German and English as Language A1 and A2 (as well as either a science or mathematics at higher level), s/he is awarded a bilingual diploma which is recognized by the German Kultusministerium as the equivalent of the Abitur.
Proficiency means what one can do with a language in the areas of speaking, listening, reading and writing. Students are regularly tested in these areas by means of standardized tests which indicate what their proficiency levels are according to grids developed by the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL) and by the Center for Applied Linguistics (CAL). Furthermore, students are also placed on a continuum for German, established by the teachers at FIS, which was modeled on the language learning continuums by the well-known researcher Bonnie Campbell Hill. A continuum indicates to teachers and parents the steps a learner has taken in improving his/her language learning and the steps still to be taken.

What follows are the sequences and the desired proficiency objectives of German courses at FIS.

UPPER SCHOOL BEGINNERS GRADES 6-12

After completion of German 1 – Beginners – a student should have reached the stage of Novice-Mid.

Speaking
Student is able to satisfy immediate needs using learned utterances. Demonstrates limited ability to create original sentences or cope with simple survival situations. Can ask questions or make memorized utterances or formulae. Vocabulary is limited to common areas in various everyday situations. Grammar shows only a few parts of speech. Verbs are generally in the present tense. Errors may be frequent and may severely inhibit communication. Speakers may have difficulties expressing basic needs.

Listening
Student is able to understand short, learned utterances and some sentence-length phrases, particularly where context strongly supports understanding and speech is clearly audible. Comprehends words and phrases from simple questions, statements, high-frequency commands and courtesy formulae. May require repetition, rephrasing and/or a slowed rate of speech for comprehension.

Reading
Student has sufficient control of the writing system to interpret written language in areas of practical need. Where vocabulary has been learned, can read for instructional and directional purposes standardized messages, phrases or expressions. At times, but not on a consistent basis, the reader may be able to derive meaning from material at a slightly higher level where context is supportive.

Writing
Student is able to write simple fixed expressions and limited memorized material. Can supply basic information. Can write limited learned vocabulary for common objects, short phrases and simple lists. Writes in sentences or short phrases using very basic subject/verb/object word order. Can ask or answer very simple yes/no or information questions using limited memorized or very familiar sentence patterns, with frequent misspellings and inaccuracies. Has a concept of gender. Can sometimes create own sentences in the language but often uses memorized material or transformations of familiar patterns.
OBJECTIVES

PROFICIENCY GUIDELINES FOR GERMAN 2 - INTERMEDIATE

After completion of German 2 – Intermediate – a student should have reached the stage of Intermediate-Mid.

Speaking
Student is able to handle successfully a variety of uncomplicated, basic and communicative tasks and social situations. Can ask and answer questions, initiate and respond to simple statements and maintain conversation, although in a highly restricted manner and with much linguistic inaccuracy. Within these limitations student can perform simple everyday tasks. Utterance length increases slightly compared to German 1. Vocabulary is adequate to express the most elementary needs. Pronunciation may continue to be influenced by first language. Misunderstandings frequently arise, but with repetition, can generally be understood by a sympathetic interlocutor.

Listening
Student is able to understand sentence-length utterances which consist of recombination of learned phrases on a variety of topics. Content continues to refer primarily to basic personal background and needs, social conventions and somewhat more complex tasks. Additional content areas include some personal interests and activities and a greater diversity of instructions and directions. Listening tasks not only pertain to spontaneous conversations but also to short routine conversations and some deliberate speech.

Reading
Student is able to get ideas and main information from basic texts featuring description and narration. He/she is able to read consistently with increased understanding of simple texts dealing with a variety of basic and social needs. Able to make suppositions about basic information to which the reader brings personal interest and/or personal knowledge. Student may have to read material several times for understanding.

Writing
Student is able meet a number of practical writing needs. Can write short and simple texts. Can create statements or questions within the scope of limited language experience. Material produced consists of recombination of learned vocabulary and structures into simple sentences on very familiar topics. Writing tends to be a loose collection of sentences or sentence fragments.
UPPER SCHOOL PROFICIENCY GUIDELINES
FOR GERMAN 3 – ADVANCED

After completion of German 3 – Advanced – a student should have reached the stage of Advanced.

Speaking
Student is able to satisfy the requirements of everyday situations. He/she can handle complicated tasks and social situations with confidence. Can narrate and describe with some details, linking sentences together smoothly. Can communicate facts and talk casually about topics of current public and personal interest, using general vocabulary. The Advanced-level speaker can generally be understood without difficulty.

Listening
Student is able to understand main ideas of connected discourse on a variety of topics. Comprehension may be uneven due to a variety of linguistic or extra-linguistic factors. Listener is aware of cohesive devices and may occasionally follow the sequence of thought in texts that frequently involve description and narration in different time frames or aspects.

Reading
Student is able to read paragraphs of certain length, particularly if presented with a clear underlying structure. Reader gets the main ideas and facts and misses some details. Comprehension derives not only from situational and subject matter knowledge but from increasing command of the language.

Writing
Student is able to write simple discourse of at least several paragraphs in length on familiar topics. Has sufficient writing vocabulary to express self simply with some circumlocution. He/she may still make errors in punctuation, grammar and spelling. Uses a limited number of cohesive devices accurately. Writing may resemble literal translations from the native language, but a sense of organization is emerging.
PROFICIENCY GUIDELINES FOR B PREP GERMAN
GRADE 10-12

After completion of IB prep German, a student should have reached the following level in the four language skills:

Speaking
Student is able to communicate clearly and effectively in a range of situations. He/she should understand and use accurately oral forms of the language that are commonly encountered in a range of situations and select a register that is generally appropriate to the situation. Ideas are expressed with general clarity and some fluency. Student can understand and respond appropriately to spoken material of average difficulty.

Listening
Student is able to recognize the sounds of the language that are essential for effective communication. Student can recognize and interpret correctly. He/she can understand grammatical structures that belong to natural, idiomatic speech. The student can understand language spoken at average pace within a sufficient range of vocabulary.

Reading
Student is able to identify a range of types of text and register. Student can understand sentence structure and see how linguistic cohesion is maintained in a written text. Student can understand information that is explicitly stated and how ideas relate to each other. Student can extract key points of the text as well as textual details.

Writing
Student is able to understand and use accurately written forms of the language that are commonly encountered in a range of situations. Student can understand and respond appropriately to written material of average difficulty. Student can write in a range of types of text (literacy, non-literary) and can use a range of vocabulary appropriately. Student can imply ideas through the choice of language and indicate personal attitude. Student can convey information clearly.
PROFICIENCY GUIDELINES FOR DEUTSCH

By the end of the school year students are expected to have reached the following proficiencies:

Speaking
Student is able to speak fluently in coherent sentences and to pronounce familiar words accurately. Uses differentiated vocabulary and correct syntax. Articulates ideas and opinions clearly. Narrates events and experiences at appropriate speed. Can re-tell plots of stories read at home or in class. Can give short, connected speeches using notes and can recite memorized poetry.

Listening
Student is able to follow instructions. He/she can understand main ideas of all types of speech and texts. Can take down dictations given at appropriate speed and with logical/syntactical pauses.

Reading
Student is able to read at appropriate speed familiar and non-familiar texts. Can read and comprehend texts.

Writing
Student is able to spell familiar words correctly. Can spell most unfamiliar words phonetically correctly. Differentiates between simple, compound and complex sentence structures. Uses tenses, cases, mode and voice properly. Can write narrative essays, reports, characterizations, plot summaries, descriptions and is able to describe events.

- communicate information and some basic ideas clearly and effectively, in a limited range of situations
- understand and use accurately the essential spoken and written forms of the language in a limited range of situations
- understand and use a limited range of vocabulary in common usage
- use a register that is generally appropriate to the situation
- show an awareness of some elements of the culture(s) related to the language studied
Here are eight reasons for learning German:

1. German is the most widely spoken foreign language in Europe.

   More people speak German as their native language than any other language in Europe. It’s no wonder, since Germany’s 83 million inhabitants make it the most populous European nation. But not only the residents of Germany speak German. It is also an official language of Austria, Switzerland, Luxembourg, and Liechtenstein. It is the native language of a significant portion of the population in northern Italy, eastern Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark, eastern France, parts of Poland, the Czech Republic, Russia, and Romania, as well as in other parts of Europe.

   While learning German can connect you to 120 million native speakers around the globe, remember that many people also learn German as a second language. It is the third most popular foreign language taught worldwide and the second most popular in Europe and Japan, after English.

2. Knowing German creates business opportunities.

   Germany has one of the strongest economies in the world. Germany’s economic strength equals business opportunities. Multinational business opportunities exist throughout the European Union and in Eastern European countries, where German is the second most spoken language after Russian. Companies like BMW, Daimler, Siemens, Lufthansa, SAP, Bosch, Infineon, BASF, and many others need international partners. The Japanese, who have the world’s second strongest economy, understand the business advantages that a knowledge of German will bring them: 68% of Japanese students study German.

3. Germans are innovators.

   From Gutenberg’s printing press to Hertz’s discovery of electromagnetic waves, from Ehrlich’s development of chemotherapy to Einstein’s theory of relativity, to Brandenburg’s creation of the MP3 digital music format, throughout history Germans have proven themselves time and again to be great innovators. That trend continues today. Four of the world’s 10 most innovative companies are located in Germany and at 12.7% of the world’s patent applications, the country ranks 3rd in the world. Consequently, 200,000 businesses introduce new products on the market each year.

   As a nation committed to research and development, Germans are on the frontline of new technologies. Germany exports more high-tech products than any other country except the U.S. and more than 600 firms are active in the cutting-edge field of biotechnology. 115 of these are located in Munich alone. The East German city of Dresden has become Europe’s microchip center with its more than 765 semiconductor firms.
Given the Germans' commitment to innovation, it is perhaps not surprising that two-thirds of the world's leading international trade fairs take place in Germany. These include CeBIT, the world’s largest trade fair for information and communications technology, and the IFA consumer electronics trade fair.

Such cultural mainstays as kindergarten, the Christmas tree, hot dogs and hamburgers were introduced by German immigrants to America. They founded multiple breweries, created Levi's jeans, invented ketchup, and created Hershey's chocolate. Germans had such a fundamental presence at the time of the founding of the United States that a German language version of the Declaration of Independence was printed only a few days after it was adopted.

4. The German presence on the Internet supersedes most others.

Considering what great innovators the Germans are, it's not at all surprising that they maintain a dominant Internet presence. With 8 million Internet domains, Germany's top-level country domain .de is second only to the extension .com. That makes German domain names even more popular than those with .net, .org, .info, and .biz extensions. Even the second-place country extension .uk trails far behind at 3.7 million domain names.

5. One in ten books in the world is published in German.

German is not only a language of the past. As prolific researchers and scholars, German speakers produce nearly 80,000 new book titles each year. The only language markets that produce more books annually are the Chinese and English publishing industries. In number of books published, Munich is second in the world only to New York. Since only a small percentage of German books are translated into other languages (for instance, approximately 10% into Korean and Chinese, just over 5% into English), only a knowledge of German will give you access to a vast majority of these titles.

6. German-speaking countries have a rich cultural heritage.

Apart from their many contributions to American culture, German speakers have a rich cultural heritage in their own right. Germany is often referred to as the land of “Dichter und Denker” - of poets and thinkers. And rightly so, because German contributions to the arts and human thought have been nothing short of profound.

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Thomas Mann, Franz Kafka, and Hermann Hesse are just a few authors whose names and works are well-known internationally. 10 Nobel prizes for literature have been awarded to German, Austrian, and Swiss German authors. The world of classical music is inseparable from the names of Mozart, Bach, Beethoven, Strauss, and Wagner to name only a few renowned German-speaking composers. Vienna remains an international center of music today. From the magnificent architecture of medieval buildings to the avant garde Bauhaus movement, from Dürer’s woodcuts to the expressionist masterpieces of Nolde, Kirchner, and Kokoschka, Germans have made substantial contributions to world art and architecture.
Philosophy and the sciences would also be unthinkable without the contributions of German speakers. The philosophies of Kant, Hegel, Marx, Nietzsche, and numerous others have had lasting influences on modern society. The psychologists Freud and Jung forever changed the way we think about human behavior. Scientists from the three major German-speaking countries have won dozens of Nobel prizes in physics, chemistry, and medicine.

Knowing German allows you to access the works of these people in their original language and to fully understand the culture whence they derived. Anyone interested in these fields automatically expands her knowledge and skill by knowing German.

7. German is required or recommended by many undergraduate and graduate programs.

German speakers’ strong contributions in such a broad array of fields make the language an important asset in many disciplines. At the University of California, for instance, more majors recommend a knowledge of German as an important supplement than any other language (German: 56 majors, French: 43 majors, Spanish: 21 majors, Japanese: 7 majors). These majors include a wide range of subjects -- from biology, physics, and chemistry to linguistics, religious studies, and art history.

Considering the importance of the German language in the fields of publishing and research, it’s not surprising that many graduate schools want their graduates to have at least a reading knowledge of German. Knowing German gives graduates access to important research published in German books and professional journals.

8. Hidden advantages

If you are a foreign visitor, learning German will enable you to get more out of your stay in Germany and more out of your travels in other German-speaking countries. You will make friends more easily and have greater insight into another culture.

If you are a native German speaker, continuing to learn German will introduce you further to your cultural heritage. Furthermore, research has shown that keeping up the study of your mother tongue enables you to learn other languages more quickly and more efficiently!
